“ Hey bro! It's been two long years and a lot has happened. Babies have been born, our babies have graduated, new careers, just trying to move forward and live in a world without my big brother. Ma is still grieving. She has had a husband, brother, daughter in law, son, ex husband and mother to die all within 5 years. That's a lot on a person. People don't understand, but she don't have to worry, leave it up to me, I will make people understand. Monta, Dookie and Zyreah all graduated in May of this year. They are continuing to make you proud. Oh, and Monta has made you a great uncle and me a grandma. I added to your host of nephews as well. I know, I know, I be doing some crazy stuff sometimes. But you have 2 new nephews. They are only 4 months apart. I know if you was here, you be clowning me every chance you get. Cause we both know, I really didn't like kids growing up and look at me now with 4. I started a new job that's growing on me everyday. I haven't been to see since I got your headstone placed. I'm sorry about that. I not mental ready for that yet. Don't know if I would ever be, honestly. Dad died in the same year that you passed. You probably already knew that. All yall probably together partying in heaven together. A big chunk of our family has been taken away from us in such a short period of time. I wish you all were still here. I try not to think about yall, which is my way of grieving. It's not working, but I don't know how else to handle the hurt that I feel. Well, I'm finish writing this book. I just searched my name on Google and you came up on this website. So, I thought I would give you a update on what we got going on in this crazy world that you left behind. I love you my brother and I miss you dearly. 😞

“ Dear Daddy, nothing can amount to how much I miss you, when you left I felt like I had nothing left, first, it was my lady, then you, I felt like God was punishing me for everything I put yall through, I just want to thank you for raising me for fifteen years, for being the best dad ever, yes we had our times but it was all worth it in the end, thank you always being there, even after we lost my lady, it was soo much more I wanted to say to you, do with you, express to you that I never got to do, if I've never told you or you never felt it, I LOVE YOU!!!, I really do with my everything, people always say you never know how much someone means to you until you lose them, and I see that, I realized that two years ago, but I never thought it'll be you too, I find myself texting your phone all the time, I often cry a lot, thinking about you, you really broke me with this one, your death was so unexpected, but you got to see me go into my Sophmore year and now I'm a junior, my senior year is going to be crucial but I'm going to push through and make you proud i promise, but now its no more Valentines gifts from you, no more Fathers day, no more Thanksgiving, Christmas, no more Birthdays, all that is gone now, and so are you, I love you soo much daddy, always will!!!
~ love, your one and only daughter Zyreah.
